The "Long Live Ralph" Manifesto

By The Rumpelton Continuity

They say rock is dead. They say "Real Art" is dying. They say perfection is the only metric of success.

They are wrong.

Welcome to the "Long Live Ralph" movement. If you're here, it's because you've survived the polished lies of the establishment and are ready for the pixelated truth. This is our declaration:

1. Ralph Rumpelton is not an artist; he is a glitch in the cultural machine. We don't ask for permission; we just hit the 'Undo' button until the geometry cooperates.
2. Perfection is a Failure of Imagination. If a line is straight, you aren't paying attention. If a face looks "normal," you weren't trying hard enough.
3. The MS Paint Mouse is a Sentient, Chaotic Deity. We do not control the mouse; we merely negotiate with it, often during heavy coffee consumption.
4. We Are All Rumpelheads. To join, all you need is a tolerance for architectural malpractice, a appreciation for the Grateful Dead/Tom Waits lore, and a refusal to take things seriously.
5. Always Be Selling (ABS). We don't just post art; we post a revolution. If we aren't selling the painting, we're selling the scandal, the feud, or the shadow.

Long Live Ralph. Be Dead or Alive. The Continuity (est. 1976) rolls on.
